

SUMMARY ON SPEAKER SERIES - NIKUNJ DOSHI

I recently attended Nikunj Doshi's speaker series online, and as part of the session, Nikunj Doshi offered invaluable insights into Smart Networking, Job Hunting Tips, leveraging LinkedIn, effective resume writing, and understanding current market situations. Initially, he highlighted why he is notable at Northeastern, highlighting his multiple achievements. Notably, he was a TA for three courses, volunteered for over 20 organizations, and was a distinguished Husky Huntington 100 Award Winner, Class of 2021.

He proceeded to share several techniques he integrated into his academic and professional life. These included the Deep Work technique, Biological Prime Time technique, and Pomodoro Technique. Such methods showcase how one can efficiently plan tasks. Doshi highlighted the significance of Time Logging, Time Blocking, and Boxing to identify and improve areas in our schedules.

Further into the session, he emphasized the prime role networking plays during one's master's journey. He provided insights into leveraging LinkedIn optimally, detailing essential components for an effective profile. Additionally, he shared resume writing strategies that contributed to securing his position at Red Hat.

As a master's student myself, this speaker series was enlightening. The session provided insights that I believe will help my academic and professional trajectory.
